READING EXERCISE: POVS

Authors use different points-of view to tell their stories. POV allows us to get inside the head of the character and learn more about their inner thoughts and feelings. Imagine the story was told from a narrator voice only. That would mean we could SEE what was happening in the story and HEAR what the characters were saying but not KNOW what they're feeling. A character might lie and SAY they are happy but actually be sad inside.

In Chapter 9 we get to see the story from ENDERA's POV:

Why does the author allow us inside Endera's head?

---

---

How did you feel when her mother ignored her comment about her high marks in Magical Maths?

---

---

How did you feel when Melistra grabbed her by the collar?

---

---

How did you feel when Endera asks why it is Abigail is so bad?

---

---

After seeing the story from Endera's POV, does it change how you think about her?
